The Famous Singer in Excellent Voice Her Programme Made With Much Skill and Her Singing Filled With Elequent Expression-A Fine Lesson for Other Singers and Students.

Mme. Sembrich's annual song recital, which took place yesterday afternoon at Carnegie Hall, presented the spectacle now customary at these most delectable outpourings of art. There were the great audience of enthusiasts and connoisseurs, the brother and sister singers who went to pay the tribute of their sincere admiration, and the teachers and students of singing -ho were present to pick up a little useful speriedge. It would be easy to sum up all the rest by saying that the great singer was at her very best.

Mme. Sembrich has never sung here with greater beauty of tone, more exquisite finish or deeper and wider expression than she did yesterday afternoon. The most glowing adjectives in the vocabulary of critical laudation could not convey any higher praise than that plain assertion. The programme was one of rare beauty, and it was made with consummate skill. Only in the final group did it fall below the level reached in the first two, and what else could be expected after the great songs placed in the earlier parts? The first group consisted of "Batti, basti," "Caro mio ben," *Lusinghe piu care" and "Where the bee

The concealed skill in this arrangement lay in the placing at the beginning of songs of which the range was chiefly in the middle register, and whose reposeful classic cantilena set the voice in perfect condition for what was to follow. Classic songs are customarily put at the beginning of recital programmes, but good judgment is not always shown in selecting those which will best warm up the voice.

The Mozart air at the opening was sufficient to do the work for Mme. Sembrich esterday. When she reached "Caro mio her voice was as warm and tender is the tint of a blush rose and her command of expressional nuance so great as to bring tears to the eyes of a sensitive listener. Her delivery of the florid Handel air, which came next, was a model of classic florituri singing, and her reading of Dr. Arne's charming lyric and her reading of Dr. Arnes charming lyric was daintiness and airy sweetness incarnate. The second group consisted of "Die Forelle," "Wie Melodien," "Mit Myrthen und Rosen," "Aulträge," Allerseelen," "All mein Gedanke," and "Heimliche Aufforderung." In these songs the singer achieved a real triumph. Only those thoroughly acquainted with song literatura know what a range of with song literature know what a range of style and expression this group demands. The delicacy ingratiating hu mor, insinu-The delicacy ingratiating hu mor, insinuating sentimen tand captivating coquetitishmers given to the readings of "Die Forelle," "Auftrage" and "All mein Gedanken" were equalled only by the eloquent and communicative emotion poured into the others. Never has Strauss's noble song, "Allerseelen," been sung in New York with such heart compelling expression as Mme Sembrich gave to it yestenday. She had to repeat the exquisite Brahms "Wie Melodien," one of her finest conceptions, and to follow the group with the Strauss "Serenade," sung as only she can sing it.

the group with the Strauss "Serenade," sung as only she can sing it.

In the last group were Hahn's "Tous deux," Debussy's "Romance," Vidal is "Printemps Nouveau," two songs of Wolff, one by Reger and Grieg's "Ein Traum." This group was supplemented by "Der Nussbaum." The Vilal song made the best impression among the French lyrice, but Mme. Sembrich's highest art was shown in Wolff's "Mögen alle bösen Zungen." Isidore Luckstone's accompaniments were worthy of the occion. They were admirable in tone, color and sympathy with worthy of the occiden. They were admirable in tone, color and sympathy with the singer.

"It's Councilman Carney," said a stranger. "It is not," said Councilman Carney, and then he rushed into the hall and scared Janitor Bernard J. McWatters, who was one of the first to hear a rumor that McCarney was dead at his home and had placed the flag at half mast after corsulting two or three members of the Common Council, all of whom had heard that Carney had died suddenly.

SOCIALISTS ARE COCK-A-WHOOP. Say the Issue Is Between Them and Re-

The New York State committee of the Social Democratic party met yesterday at the Labor Lyceum, 64 East Fourth street, and received returns of the Socialist vote from out of the State. Eugene V. Debs, the head of the party, is expected in this city this week, when there will be a jubilation over the growth of the Socialist vote. The State committee declares that the returns show an increase of between 500 and 600 per cent. since Debs was a candidate for President in 1900. The total vote then was 97,730 throughout the country, and this year they say it is between 500,000 and

The principal gain was in Illinois, where four years ago the State gave 9.687 votes, and this year about 75,000, of which 42,000 votes came from Chicago. New York State Lolds the second place with from 40,000 to 50,000 for Debs, compared with 12,869 in 1900. In Greater New York Debs got 23,516 votes, against 9,277 in 1900. #### UTICA LAWYER A LUNATIC. He Galloped on Horseback Into the Dynamo

Room of the Electrical Plant. UTICA, Nov. 12.-Edward D. Matthews of this city, until a short time ago one of the foremost corporation lawyers and promoters in central New York, was arrested on the street to-day as a dangerous lunatic, and will be committed to a sanitarium. Last night Matthews, mounted on a horse drove into the dynamo section of the Utica Gas and Electric Company's plant and, putting spurs to the animal, galloped around the large room, many times barely missing contact with the whizzing electrical generators.

It is coubtful if Mr. Matthews ever recovers his reason. His mental disturbance dates from his failure to raise sufficient funds to develop the water power of Tren-ton Falls, the feasibility of which scheme ton rails, the feasitility of which scheme he championed for many years, only to see his pet project taken over and worked out successfully by capitalists better off financially than himself. Recently he had armed himself, and, fearing he would do violence, he was taken into custody to-day as he was about to draw a pistol.
